A little Italian car with added space Rameder presents towbars and bike carriers for the Fiat 500L

What the Beetle once was for Germany, the Fiat 500 certainly was for Italy. Even 60 years after the first Nuova 500 was launched, Fiat still sells cars bearing that famous name. While except for some visual elements the minivan Fiat 500L, launched in 2012 on a Punto platform, this new make has not much to do with its first incarnation, its versatility and retro looks make it very popular indeed. And it gets even more versatile with a Rameder towbar... The company's online shop at www.rameder.eu has other transport accessories available, by the way.

Rameder sells both fixed (from €119) and removable (from €195) towbars, which are also available including the electric kit (from both fixed: €164, removable: €240). Towbars do not only allow you to tow various kinds of trailer but also to affix a bike carrier. Now you can carry two, three or even four bicycles and in a much more comfortable fashion than on a roof rack, too. Besides, this solution is also preferable in terms of stability and fuel consumption.

But the little Italian's capacities can be enhanced elsewhere too. Although with inclined back seats the 500L may be able to have a Nuova 500 pushed into its boot, more space is certainly indicated. Therefore, Rameder also sells several other accessories for the Fiat 500L, e.g. various roof racks for bikes, skiers and snowboards.
